Community Corrections Division 2 has new administrators

Kim Williams

Lewis Adams

SMITHFIELD — Kimberly Williams has been administrator of the Division of Community Corrections' Division 2, which covers 21 central and southeastern North Carolina counties.

She is responsible for the probation and parole operations of a division that has 600 employees and more than 29,000 offenders under community supervision. Counties in the division are Alamance, Bladen, Brunswick, Caswell, Chatham, Columbus, Cumberland, Durham, Franklin, Granville, Harnett, Hoke, Johnston, Lee, Orange, Person, Robeson, Scotland, Vance, Wake and Warren.

Since February 2010, Williams has been assistant manager of Community Corrections' District 7, which covers Edgecombe, Nash, Pitt and Wilson counties. She began her career in 1987 as a pre-parole investigator for Parole Services and rose through the ranks.

Williams has a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from N.C. Wesleyan College. She is also a recent graduate of the Department of Correction's executive leadership development program and is a certified instructor in correctional training and firearms use.

She and her husband, Mike, and daughter, Brittany, reside in Winterville.

Assisting Williams in managing Division 2 operations will be Lewis A. Adams, who has been manager of Community Corrections District 4 since May 2010. He began his career in 1992 as a probation officer in Richmond County, and progressed through the ranks in New Hanover County.

Adams is in the current class of the Correctional Leadership Development Program and is a member of the team implementing Justice Reinvestment in the department.

Adams earned a bachelor of science degree in political science from UNC-Pembroke in 1990. He is a certified correctional training instructor who specializes in firearms.
